

Live and study in Ghana this summer.

Professor Jini Roby and Dr. Kevin Shafer at the School of Social Work will be taking eight student interns to Accra, Ghana during spring term and three during summer term. The team will examine the outcomes of children who are reunified with their families after an extended stay in an orphanage. To apply, applicants are required to have research experience, demonstrate cultural sensitivity, and have good people skills. In preparation, students will enroll in a Global Perspectives of Social Work course. In Ghana, students will receive free housing at the University of Ghana, Legon. Partial funding is available.
